

Academic Senate

Faculty Research Lectureship

Dear Colleagues,

It is my pleasure to inform you that the Academic Senate has selected the recipients of the 2017-2018 Faculty Research Lectureships:

- 123rd Faculty Research Lecture, Michael Green (Psychiatry)
- 124th Faculty Research Lecture, Ellen DuBois (History)

It is a great honor to be awarded the Faculty Research Lectureship, a tradition that began at UCLA in 1925. Each year since 1986, two of our most distinguished faculty members have been honored, one from the natural sciences and the other from the humanities, social disciplines, or creative arts. Next year's lecturers will join this very select group of UCLA's most accomplished scholars.

Each of the winners will present a public lecture on a topic of their choice, traditionally one in fall quarter and the other in spring quarter. The campus community is invited to the lecture and to a reception given in honor of the Faculty Research Lecturer immediately following the presentation.

All of this year's nominees for these awards had outstanding records of accomplishment and the Senate recognizes that the nomination itself is a great distinction. We encourage you to re-nominate worthy candidates as winners are often repeat nominees.

Please accept our sincere gratitude for your nominations, as we look forward to having our distinguished faculty give the campus and greater UCLA community an opportunity to understand and recognize their scholarly achievements.

Sincerely,

Susan Cochran
